ABSTRACT

These profiles of 28 depositories and government documents libraries in the state of Alabama itemize official depository status, subject concentration, and location of the documents within the library for each institution. The profiles also explain the organization and classification scheme of the document collection, circulation parameters, and general policies regarding use of the documents. Duplication facilities, interlibrary loan restrictions, and personnel servicing these collections are also included as an aid to the patron in search of government documents. Indexes list the government depositories by library and by parent institution. (SW)

PURPOSE

The purpose of this directory is to make it possible for all libraries and patrons in the State of Alabama to know where the depositories are located as well as the type of documents each one receives. In addition the directory includes some libraries that are not depositories but have extensive holdings of documents available for public use.

The location of the documents within each library is given. The classification scheme used in numbering the collection and the facts regarding a divided or intact collection are included.

Policies regarding the use of government documents in each library are given in brief, as well as information which will enable the patron to know if certain documents can be obtained or if materials can be duplicated.

Duplication facilities, cost of duplication, and personnel servicing these collections are also included to further assist a patron in research into government documents in the state.

The invaluable service of interlibrary loan can place any of these items nearer to the researcher. Availability of this service from each library is indicated.

FORMAT

Libraries are listed alphabetically under the city in which each is located, but additional indexes list each library by name of library and then by name of parent institution.

Regional depository status signifies receipt of all federal publications published by the Government Printing Office. Partial depository status indicates that the library selects items in the subject areas best suited for the library's curriculum or philosophy.

Numbers following the status designation signify simply the unique number assigned to each depository within the depository system and the year in which the library received its designation.

STATEMENT:	The Mervyn H. Sterne Library is not a Federal Documents Depository. Inclusion of this statement in the Directory is for informational purposes to place in the public's hand facts regarding the documents' holdings of the library. Because of the extensive purchases of federal documents on microfiche, Sterne Library's collection is conducive to research. Through selective purchases from Federal brochures, catalogs, bibliographies and other listings, the Sterne Library adds several hundred titles in print format to the documents collection each year. The major collection of documents is in non-print form (microfiche) and is composed of such titles as: Congressional Information Service (CIS) (collection of legislative publications); American Statistics Index (ASI) (collection of federally published statistical publications); Congressional Hearings; Committee Prints; Federal Register (fiche & print) Serial Set; U. S. Census Publications; Congressional Records (film & print); Declassified Documents; ERIC (Educational Resources Information Center); Bureau of American Ethnology publications.
